

Communication Role Plays

In your role play, both partners address:

- What happened?
- How are you feeling?
- What are your needs?
- What do you request?

Scenario 1

Partner A: Tell Partner B that you saw them flirting with someone else and that you are hurt.

Partner B: You have not seen Partner A (your childhood friend) in a long time.

Scenario 2

Partner A: Partner B and your friends are embarrassing you on the bus by being loud and obnoxious. You want them to stop.

Partner B: Partner A is acting as if they know everything. You don't like feeling controlled by them.

Scenario 3

Partner A: You see Partner B shoplifting. You want them to put the stolen item back.

Partner B: You often take things from big stores. It's no big deal.

Scenario 4

Partner A: You ask the coach if you can be on the Debate Team. You missed the tryouts.

Partner B: You are the coach of the Debate Team. Partner A is a student who missed the tryout to be on the team.

Scenario 5

Partner A: Tell Partner B that you have a sexually transmitted infection. You didn't know you had it until now. It was from a previous partner before you started dating Partner B.

Partner B: You think that Partner A cheated on you because they have a sexually transmitted infection.

Scenario 6

Partner A: You treated Partner B (your sibling) badly in front of your friends. You regret it and want to apologize.

Partner B: Partner A (your sibling) was trying to be cool in front of their friends and was making fun of you.
